As the largest legal aid agency in Connecticut, CLS services 58% of Connecticut's poverty population living in 122 communities, excluding Hartford and New Haven. HISTORY AND MISSION OF CLS

CLS formed in 1977 through the merger of six regional legal services providers. CLS operates six full-service offices in Stamford, Bridgeport, Waterbury, New Britain, New London, and Willimantic and includes satellite offices in Meriden, Vernon, and Middletown. In addition to providing individual legal representation and counseling, CLS does broad impact work that benefits low income individuals through policy advocacy, class action litigation, providing and disseminating legal self-help materials, community outreach and education, and working with coalitions to pursue common goals. CLS is a leader in the state in recognizing and addressing systemic problems affecting low-income residents.

CLS provides legal services that are vitally important to its clients. CLS' legal work encompasses family law, housing, public benefits, elder law, children's law, consumer law, immigration law, employment law, and assistance to people with intellectual disabilities. In spite of severe economic downturn in recent years, CLS continues to serve the community without compromising the quality of services offered.

CLS is committed to growth and resource development to ensure the organization maximizes impact and addresses vital issues for its clients. The great work of CLS attorneys has had a tremendous impact on the lives of those they serve, whether it's saving a family from homelessness, ensuring a disabled individual accesses benefits, or re-homing a teenager suffering from domestic abuse.
